WHOLE NATION IS AROUSED

Sinking of Two Ships by German Submarines, With Loss of More Than 100 Lives Starts Alarm Operations in the Carpathians Are Crucial.By Associated Press
LONDON, March 30.—Prohibition is a deadly pest that prevails in France today from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, of the latter sent by David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the exchequer, in the ship owners' federation competitor successfully to point a finger with the news of the sinking of the British liner Lusitania by a German submarine with the loss of more than 100 lives. The chancellor in his letter said:

"We are fighting Germany, Austria and Italy and we must not let them win the war. These three deadly foes are linked and allied that they have a strong conviction that out of our stern methods we will be of avail in dealing with the evil."

The emphatic words striking which Mr. George terms of war and branch action, even to the extent of bombing to death the men who are the leaders of their ships, will not be effective in their struggle. Lloyd George's methods are quickly answered for the institution of some prohibitionary measures.

Great Britain is smouldering, in anger over the torpedoing by a German submarine of the steamer Laconia and Antioch, and a combination of experts and the latest outbreak of submarine activity will have no effect under the moment of British fury.

Reports from Liverpool say the capture of German submarines show that Field Marshal von Hindenburg attached great importance to the German submarine movement in the region of the Stomian river. At present he or any in the English service is to do anything more than a trifling and all other as those of the extended eastern battle front seem to be waiting the outcome of the death struggle in the Caribbean and the Mediterranean. There is a certain air of still only continuing every fact gained in the invasion.

So much has been said about terminating the expected resumption of the battle of Britain in the Dardanelles that a modicum of relief that the Lusitania has swept the British navy for the day.DON KICKED OUT AFTER PIT WITH THE KAISER

LONDON, March 30.—General von Knebel, the German commander who led the advance from the Baltic, was arrested while recklessly inspecting tanks at the most dangerous point on the line after a stormy interview with Emperor William, according to dispatch from Amsterdam.

It is learned from the same source that the opinion is expressed in Berlin that the result of the battle of the emperor will contrast the command and of von Knebel's army to Prince Fielder.

FORMER JUDGE TAKES HIS PART

Startling Evidence Alleged to Have Been Discovered in Favor of School Teacher Who Was Convicted and
New Trial Is Asked; Other NewsST. CLOUD, Minn., March 30.—On trial of 50 residents of Bullock's Creek and on recommendation of U. S. Commissioner, Judge E. J. Umbel, who is the lawyer for Judge J. Q. Van Sweringen, to try out and sentence on Joseph Clark, convicted of a lousie crime when his daughter Ruth, the jury which tried the case, had recommended mercy in his verdict and the petitioners to court expressed their belief that Clark was not guilty and that a new trial should be granted.
Clark, a Negro, is accused of killing his wife, Anna, and of shooting his son, John, in the face.Atkins, in the opinion for a new trial for Atley Walls, the 12-year-old school boy accused of shooting his teacher, Miss Ruth M. Langford, was convinced that new and startling testimony had been brought forward in the trial which had been held in high regard of the young man, that a withholding of the charge against him he had been accused of was justified.Miss Atkins, a widow of 11 years, was granted an allowance of $7.50 a week from the estate of her husband who was accused to be mentally ill and by court had been killed.Opposition of receivers Sturges and

Will Meet Duncan in semi-Whitup.

Jimmy Dunn of New Castle and his partner, Jim O'Day, arrived here at 9:15 yesterday morning. Dunn is in fine shape and expects to give Fay Kaiser, the Denver Wildcat, the fight of his life before the Connellsville Athletic Club tonight. Chip and Kaiser will go over the fastest rounds ever seen here.

Bill Carter, the negro, who has been working out with Kaiser, has proven himself to be a crammer of no mean ability with the gloves and he promises to give Ted Buttermore, of Uniontown, a hard tussle. Carter has surprised the habitués of the gymnasium with his ability. Arch Parker, the wrestler, has been trouting Kaiser.

The other ruff will be between Ted Buttermore and Josh Cole, a baseball pitcher and all-around athlete. But-termore has been boxing at all the shows held here, but none of his opponents have made him exert himself.
The little ruff boxers are colored gentlemen, is expected to be a big fan-frolic. The combatants will be boxed loose on each other and the last man standing will be declared the winner.

Fay Kaiser has been booked by Jack Stevens, his manager, to meet Johnny Lewis in a preliminary at the Johnny Clifford-WHILLI Bitch bout on April 2 at Pittsburgh. If he wins he will be matched with Harry Lewis in the whiffle of some future show. Fay Kaiser is a wild, keen ruff, but recently Keppey has shown wonderful improvement and he is now considered a sure shot in the Pittsburgh boxing rings.

Frank Rains of Braddock will be unable to referee the bouts, but a new referee will be secured.

Joe Turner, the wrestler, with Stevens, did he may be able to compete on April 2 for a match with Arch Parker. Turner is going to Houston, Tex., for a number of days but will not leave until about April 3.

INDIAN CREEK, March 26.—The peers of 300 inhabitants of the inhabitants of our village were disturbed at one o'clock this morning when the fire alarm was given. This the McFarland men who were on duty were one rashed to the scene and the fire fighters were victorious in quenching the blaze. The fire started in the engine room and had considerable hold before it was detected by the night watchman who was making his rounds.
When the alarm was given, it was thought that the entire structure would be destroyed and all was taken from Connellsville and Uniontown. The men here had the fire under control at 2 o'clock and Connellsville and Uniontown were notified that their aid was not needed. The company will be idle for some time.

CARUSO

World-famous Tenor, says:

"Tuxedo completely satisfies my tobacco taste. It is mild and has a delicious flavor. Most important of all, from a singer's standpoint, Tuxedo does not irritate my throat."

Caruso

"Tuxedo Does Not Irritate My Throat"

The non-irritating quality of Tuxedo which Caruso praises is due to the original "Tuxedo Process" by which the tobacco is treated. This process refines the tobacco and absolutely removes all bite and sting.

Many thousands of men think they cannot smoke a pipe, for fear the tobacco might burn or parch their mouths. Tuxedo has done away with any such possibility. You can smoke Tuxedo all day long, without any irritation whatsoever—indeed, with increasing pleasure.

Pool Room Man Greeting Big Scoreboard to Mark Up the Big League Games; Other News of Interest to the Readers of Busy Connellsville.

Spotted to The Courier, SOUTHERN, March 30. This is the story of the life of a chicken. Not the pretty ones decorated with black feathers. Ah, no, but, this is the tale of the chicken that stays at home on the roost. John Buckley, a farmer living a few miles from Southdale, is the owner of this bird. It is a cock, having had a large and strong comb, stretching up from the sides of its head, just like the comb of a cockerel, and ears of a dog. Peter Shadley says that he did not believe the story when he ever told it to him over the telephone, and consequently drove out in his automobile to see the freak.

"It surely has the ears," says Peter. "The ears are on the side of its head, pointing upward, making it look something like these pictures of Faust or the other fellow that you see on the billboards sometimes."

The chicken would make a good wife partner. It would appear for Miss John's dancing class, which recently created a fine stir, wonder about Southdale. The one son ought to make a good catch.

THE SOISSON.

In Madame Olga Petrova in "The Tigris," the Subson Theatre has secured for tomorrow one of the most absorbing dramas ever filmed. The original play was written by Guy Marlowe and made that dramatist his hit as a successful devotee of intense situations. This was release and production of Popular Plays and Players. It contains many sensational scenes, such as the escape of Stella Orlova (Madame Petrova) from prison by substituting herself for a body which had been brought to the jail and had been taken to the hospital.

The board has arranged to show the scenes of the National, American and Federal leagues.

The hand-to-hand athletic work was done by Charles D. Astor. No doubt "The Tigris," Belmont will be following this scene, as he gets the stories to study each season. Mr. Belmont is at his home in Connecticut, having gone home on Sunday. Sprout, Tuesday, the bride.

THE ARCADE.

MUSICAL CIRCUS.

One of the best all-around talent evenings shown at the Arcade this season is presented by Montreal and an ensemble cast entitled "A French Girl and Ten Men." Mack is the principal comedian and his wife, a young man, both. Mr. Montreal does different characters and introduces a solo on "The Morning After" the night before," stated "The Star of the Day." The audience proved herself well up in the kind of work.

The Jew takes out the laugh and the comedians. Mr. Wiedenfeld is used with music on an octave of the piano, which proves that the piano is not the only instrument to be used. Mr. Wheeler was cheered again and again. The show as a whole is good and received普遍的掌声 all the way through. The show closed with two United comedians.

DON'T USE SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

When you wash your hair, don't use soap. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain unsulphured coconut oil, for this is pure and entirely free of alkali. It's very cheap, and beats soap or anything else all the pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

CHAPTER XXIII.

I Sped the Parting Guest.

FOUR o'clock in the morning is a graceless hour. Graveyards may yawn at 12, but even they are content to slumber at 4. I don't believe there is anything so desolate in this world as the mental perspective one obtains at 4 o'clock. Tomstones are bright beacons of cheer as compared to the monumental regret one experiences on getting up to greet the alleged and vastly overrated glories of a budding day. The sunrise is a pall. It is a deadly, doleful thing. It may be pink and red and golden and full of all the splendors of the east, but it is a resurrection, and you can't make anything else out of it. Staying up till 4 and then going to bed gives one an idea of the sunrise that is not supported by the facts. There is but one way to appreciate the real nature of the hateful thing called dawn, and that is to get up with it instead of taking it to bed with you.

Still, I suppose the sun has to come up, and perhaps it is just as well that it does so at an hour when people are least likely to suspect it of anything so shabby.

Four o'clock is more than a graceless, sodden hour when it ushered in a day that you know is to be the unhappiest in your life; when you know that you are to say farewell forever to the hope, joy, and mirth in other days; when the ones you love smiles and goes away to smile again, but not for you. And that is just what I awoke on the morning of the 11th of September meant to me.

Britton and I set forth in the automobile just at the break of dawn, crossing the river a few miles below the castle and running back to point on the right hand bank where we were to await the arrival of the boat conveying the countess and her escort. The countess, a faint red spot in each cheek and a curiously bright, feverish glow in her dark eyes, revealed a tendency to monopolize the conversation, a condition, properly attributed to nervous excitement. I could see that she was vastly thrilled by the experiences of the hour. Her quick, alert brain was keeping pace with the rush of blood that stimulated every fiber in her body to new activities. She talked almost incessantly and chafed about matters entirely foreign to the enterprise in hand. The more I saw of women the less I know about them. Why she should have spent the whole half hour devoted to breakfast to a surprisingly innocuous dissertation on Schopenhauer and Nietzsche is, or was, beyond me.

How was I to know that tears lay close to the surface of those shimmering, vivacious eyes? How was I to know that soles took refuge behind a simulated interest in philosophy? We had luncheon pique fashion halfway to our journey's end, diverging from the main road to find a secluded spot where we could spread our cloth and open our hamper without fear of interruption or to use a more字面的 word, detection. It was rather a jolly affair, that first and last at these haunts under the spreading branches of mighty trees and beside the babbling waters of a gay little mountain brook that hurried like mad down to the broad channel of the Dunabe, now many miles away. The strain of the first few hours had slackened. Steeves seemed assured. We had encountered no difficulties, no dangers in town or country. No one appeared to be interested in us except through idle curiosity; villagers and peasants stared at us and grinned; policemen and soldiers stood aside to let us pass or gave directions politely when requested to do so. There were no signs of pursuit, no indications of trouble ahead. And so we could afford to be gay and confident at our midday meal in the hills bordering the broad highway.

We were sent so far as to arrange for a jolly rent in New York city at no distant day. I remember distinctly that we were to dine at Sherman's. To me the day seemed a long way off.

I suppose, being a writer of fiction, I should be able to supply at this point in the narrative a series of thrilling, perhaps hair raising, encounters with the enemy in the form of spies, entombed, imperial mercenaries or whatever came bravest to the imagination. It would be a very simple matter to transform this veracious history into the most lurid of melodramas by the introduction of the false and bizarre, but it is not my purpose to do so. I mean to adhere strictly to the truth and stand by the consequences. Were I inclined to sensationalism it would be no trouble at all for me to have Turnowsky's agents shooting at our tires or gasoline tank from every crag and cranny or to have Rosemary kidnapped by aeroplants supplied with drag boats or to have the countess lodged in a village prison, from which I should be obliged to liberate her with bayonets and six shooters, my compensation being a joyous rest in a hospital with the fair Aline musing me back to health and strength and cooling fond words in my bumblebees, "say that you forgive me!"

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the boat slipped into view around the tree covered point of land and headed straight for our holding price on the bank. I shall not stop here to describe the first stage of our journey through the narrow, rocky byways, that ended eventually in the broad alpine high of a nature that heretofore had been commonplace and meek. But not now. None of these things happened, and I decline to perfume myself for the privilege of getting into the list of "six lost sellers."

So far as I am able to judge there was absolutely no bravado displayed during our flight through the hills and valleys unless you are willing to accept as such a single dash of sixty miles an hour which Britton made in order to avoid a rain shower that threatened to drench us if we observed the speed laws.

But wait! There was an example of bravado on my part that shall not go unrecorded. I hastened at first to put it down in writing, but my sense of honor urges me to confess everything. It happened just after that memorable picnic luncheon in the study dell. The countess, I must admit, was somewhat to blame for the incident. She suggested that we—that is to say, the two of us—explore the upper recesses of this picturesque spot, while the others were making ready for the resumption of our journey.

Shame, contrition, humiliation or whatever you may elect to call it, forbids a lengthy or even agonizing explanation of what followed her unfortunate suggestion. I shall get over with it in as few words as possible.

In the most obscure spot in all those ancient hills I succumbed to an execrable impulse to take her forcibly in my arms and kiss her! I don't know why I did it or how, but that is just what happened. My shame, my horror over the transcendental folly was made almost unbearable by the way in which she took it. At first I thought she had swooned, she lay so limp and unresisting in my arms. My only excuse, whispered penitently in her ear, was that I couldn't help doing what I had done and that I deserved to be drawn and quartered for taking advantage of my superior strength and her gentle forbearance. Strange to say, she merely looked at me in a sort of dumb wonder and quietly released herself, still staring at me as if I were the most inexplicable puzzle in the world.

Her cheeks, her throat, her brow grew warm and pink with a just indignation. Her lips parted, but she uttered no word. Then I followed her detectively, cravenly back to the roadside and executed an inward curse that would hang over my miserable head so long as it was on my shoulders.

Her vivacity was gone. She shrank down into the corner of the seat, and with her back half turned toward me, gazed steadfastly at the panorama valley which we were skirting. From time to time I glanced at her out of the corners of my eyes, and eventually was somewhat relieved to see that she had closed her own and was dozing.

My soul was in despair. She looked, despised me. I could not blame her. I despised myself.

And yet my heart quaked every time I allowed myself to think of the act I had committed.

The day was a glorious one and the road more than passably good. We bowled along at a steady rate of speed and suddenly found us about twenty-five miles from our destination. Not caring to run the risk of a prolonged stay in the town, we drew up at a roadside inn and had our dinner in the quaint little garden, afterward proceeding leisurely by moonlight down the sloping highway.

Billy Smith met us six or eight miles out, and we stopped to partay. He examined the countess, still fitfully prepared passports, pronounced them good and then gave us the cheerful news that "everything was lovely and the goose song high." The train for the coast was due to leave the Staatsbahnhof at 10:30, and we had an hour to spare.

He proposed that we spend it quite comfortably at the roadside while Britton went through the paces of repairing our tires. This seemed an agreeable arrangement for every one but Britton, who looked so grim that I, glad of the excuse, offered to help him.

No sooner was I out of the car than Billy Smith in my place beside the countess than she became quite gay and vivacious once more. She laughed and chatted with him in a manner that promptly convinced me that probably so far as I was concerned had had a most depressing effect upon her and that she reveled in the change of companions.

I was so disturbed by the discovery that Britton had to caution me several times to handle the inner tubes less roughly or I would damage them and we might suffer a blowout after all.

Every one appeared to be gay and frivolous, even Blaikie, who chattered sotto voce with Britton, that excellent rascal spending most of his time leaning against the spare tires in order to catch what she was saying for his benefit. All efforts to draw me into the general conversation were unavailing. I was as moose and unresponsive as an Egyptian mummy, and for very excellent reason, I submit.

The countess deliberately refused to address a single remark to me. Indeed, when I seemed persistently neop to be drawn into the conversation she relapsed into a silence that was most forbidding. My cup of misery was overflowing.

I wondered if she would feel called upon at some distant confessional to tell the fortunate Lord Amherdale that I had brutally kissed her. And Lord Amherdale would grin in his beauty supercilious English way and say, "What else could you have expected from a bally American bounder?" She would no doubt smile indulgently.

All things came to an end, however. We found ourselves at last uttering our goodbyes in the railway station, surrounded by hurrying travelers and attended by eager porters.

The countess did not lift her veil, I dolefully drew her aside. My hot hand clasped hers and found it as cold as ice and trembling.

"For God's sake," I whispered hoarsely in my bumblebees, "say that you forgive me!"

It was not necessary for her to conclude not speak for many seconds. Then her voice was very low and tremulous. I felt that her sombre eyes were accusing me even as they tried to meet my own with a steadiness that was meant to be reassuring.

"Of course I forgive you," she said. "You have been so good to me."

"Good!" I cried bitterly. "I've been harsh, unfeeling, supercilious from the day I met."

"Hush!" she said, laying her free hand upon my arm. "I shall never forget all that you have done for me. I can say no more."

I gulped. "I pray to heaven that you may be happy, Aline—happier than any one else in the world."

She lowered her head suddenly, and I was made more miserable than be-

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Count Wants the Castle.

THE count board the train. In my heart there was the memory of a dozen kisses I had bestowed in retentive fashion upon the half asleep Rosemary, who, God bless her little soul, cried bitterly on being torn away from my embrace.

"Well," said Billy Smith, taking me by the arm a few minutes later, "let's have a bite to eat and a cold bottle before we go to bed, old chap. I hope to heaven she gets through all right. I am strong for her, aren't you?"

"I am," said I, with conviction, coming out of a daze.

He led me off to a cafe, where he seemed to be more or less at home, and where it was bright and gay for blu but gloomier than the grave to me.

I drove the car home the next day. When we got down at the garage, Britton shivered and drew a profligate breath. It was as if he had not breathed for hours. We had gone the distance in little more than half the time taken on the trip down.

"My word, sir," was all he said, but there was a significant tremor in his voice. It smacked of pride.

Mrs. Titus plied him inquisitively how we had got along and appeared quite relieved when I told her we had caught the train at K. Jasper junior revealed a genuine interest in the enterprise, but spoiled it all by saying that Aline, now prematurely safe, was most likely to leap out of the flying pan into the fire in taking me "out of myself."

The day was a glorious one and the road more than passably good. We bowled along at a steady rate of speed and suddenly found us about twenty-five miles from our destination.

How soon was I out of the car than Billy Smith in my place beside the countess than she became quite gay and vivacious once more. She laughed and chatted with him in a manner that promptly convinced me that probably so far as I was concerned had had a most depressing effect upon her and that she reveled in the change of companions.

I was so disturbed by the discovery that Britton had to caution me several times to handle the inner tubes less roughly or I would damage them and we might suffer a blowout after all.

Every one appeared to be gay and frivolous, even Blaikie, who chattered sotto voce with Britton, that excellent rascal spending most of his time leaning against the spare tires in order to catch what she was saying for his benefit.

All efforts to draw me into the general conversation were unavailing. I was as moose and unresponsive as an Egyptian mummy, and for very excellent reason, I submit.

The countess deliberately refused to address a single remark to me. Indeed, when I seemed persistently neop to be drawn into the conversation she relapsed into a silence that was most forbidding. My cup of misery was overflowing.

I wondered if she would feel called upon at some distant confessional to tell the fortunate Lord Amherdale that I had brutally kissed her. And Lord Amherdale would grin in his beauty supercilious English way and say, "What else could you have expected from a bally American bounder?" She would no doubt smile indulgently.

We waited two days for word from the countess herself that she had successfully reached the high seas; apparent or not, the newspapers, which I read with eagerness, would have been filled with accounts of her seizure. We eagerly awaited the promised cablegram from New York announcing her safe arrival there.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I served myself to question him about the Englishman.

"Splendid fellow," said he, with drowsy enthusiasm; "one of the finest chaps I know, oh, George?"

"For an Englishman," admitted Razza.

"He's a gentleman, and that's more than you can say for the tag of nobility that paid court to Aline Turnowsky. He was in love with her, but he was a gentleman about it. A thoroughly good fellow."

"Good looking?" I inquired.

"Well, rather—the sort of chap women are about. Ask Betty. She was pitie the sentence so humbly began.

Their departure was made with some degree of caution. Mrs. Titus rather considerably penitently herself that my interests were at stake. I saw them aboard the train. She played her part admirably—I will say that for her. She lifted her veil so that I could see a farewell kiss also upon her cheek. Jasper junior's eyes popped very wide open at this, and as he shook my hand warmly at parting he said:

"You are a wonder, John—sure enough wonder. Why, bring it all, she doesn't even let dad do that."

But Jasper junior was very young, and he couldn't understand.

At last we were to ourselves, my extensive household and I. Late that night I sat in my study considering the best means of reducing my staff of servants and in computing with dismay, the cost of being a princely host to people who had not the least notion what it meant to do sums in enormous subtraction. It was soon apparent to me that retrenchment, stern and relentless, would have to follow upon my wild though brief season of profligacy. I decided to dismiss the scullery maid.

I was indescribably lonely. Poopendyke was worried about my father, my husband. At the end of a week he took it upon himself to drop a line to the Hazards, urging them to run out for a visit in the hope that company might take me out of myself. All attempts to renew my work on the ill-fated novel met with utter failure. The power of mental concentration was gone. I spent most of my time in the garden.

The Hazards came and with them the joyously beautiful Betty. Billy Poopendyke must have prepared them for the task in hand, for they proceeded at once to transform the bleak, old castle into a sort of elaborate merry go round, with me in the very vortex of it all. They succeeded in taking me "out of myself."

I will say that for them, my spirits took an upward bound and, wonderful to relate, retained their altitude in spite of all I could do to lower them. I did not want to be happy. I figured that I owned it to my recently aroused temerity to be permanently unhappy. But the wind blew another way, and I drifted aimlessly with it, as a derelict drifts with the currents of the ocean, but preferably with the warm gulf stream.

We had word from Mrs. Titus in London that negotiations had been reopened with the count and that a compromise might be expected. The indurate maledom had agreed, it seemed, to meet Jasper Titus' lawyers in Paris at no distant date. My chief concern, however, was for the countess herself. That she had successfully reached the high seas was apparent; that the newspapers, which I read with eagerness, would have been filled with accounts of her seizure. We eagerly awaited the promised cablegram from New York announcing her safe arrival there.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I served myself to question him about the Englishman.

"Oh, he's good enough for her," he said with a queer smile.

"I'm glad of that," said I gruffly.

"The old la—i mean Mrs. Titus—will be tickled to death if the match is pulled off," said Hazza.

"She was tickled the first time," said Mrs. Titus, and then, and changed the subject. There was no sense in prolonging the agony.

Toward the close of their visit a message arrived from the countess herself that she had signed with the dethous name we had agreed upon. The news she gave caused us to celebrate that night. We had a bonfire in the courtyard and drank to the god of good luck.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I served myself to question him about the Englishman.

Prevent Diphtheria.

A sore throat is a good breeding place for diphtheria germs. Protect your child in winter by giving him a Super Tonsiline, a remedy designed to TONSILINE the throat—so to speak. Diphtheria is a disease that attacks the throat in its weakened condition. When TONSILINE is swallowed it comes directly in contact with the diseased surface and induces healthy condition of the membranes—then the system can better defend the throat.

If attacked by Diphtheria germs, keep TONSILINE in the house where you can get it quick when needed. 25c, 50c, and $1.00.
